HITCHCOCK AWARD GOES TO CARTER, '48 GRAD

Jack Carter, a former editor of The Gateway, has been awarded a $1000 scholarship to the Columbia Graduate School of Journalism.

This was announced today by Columbia University in New York. Money for the grant is taken from a fund established by Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcock, widow of the founder of the Omaha World-Herald. Columbia is generally acknowledged to have the top journalism school in the country.

Only Nebraskans prepared for graduate work are eligible for the prize.

This year's recipient is a 26-year-old war veteran. He entered Omaha U in 1943, returned from the Army in '46 and was graduated in 1948 with a Bachelor of Arts degree in psychology. During his senior year he served as city editor and editor-in-chief of The Gateway and as sports editor of The Tomahawk.

Last year he taught English and journalism in the high school and junior college at Norfolk, Nebr. His school paper won an All-American honor rating, the first such award in the paper's history.

The York ball club was never within the Indian's 20-yard-line.

Dance slated at 4

A dance honoring freshmen will be held in the auditorium at 4 this afternoon. All students are invited to attend to greet the new freshmen.

Omaha U's first on-campus football game is only a day away.

The Red and Black take on the Northern Illinois State Huskies tomorrow afternoon at 2. End Bob Shoher and Fullback Fred Abboud, playing their third year of varsity football, will co-captain the Indians

Omaha also has the psychological advantage for tomorrow's fray. Besides being the first game in the Stadium, it is a home tilt and the Indians haven't been defeated in a home game since Oct. 2, 1947.
